GERMAN MARCH

JUST TWENTY YEARS ago on the 21st of this month Germany launched her last great offensive in a desperate effort to win the Great War, and attain her ambition of world domination. If the Fifth British Army under General Gough was smashed, Paris in great danger and the Allies in a desperate straits, history has told us how German armies barely halted, and how, from then on until the Armistice, the German armies gradually fell back. After the Armistice Germany lost much of the land she controlled both in Europe and in the Colonies. Hitler has intimated that he wants the German Colonial Empire restored, but he was apparently playing another game altogether, for today The Boche is on the march and is rapidly regaining the power and prestige of his pre-war days. The Treaty of Versailles has been torn up, the Saar Valley re-joined to Germany, the Rhine fortified in modern fashion, and now the Austrian Empire, once a greater power than Germany herself is no more.

Regardless of the right or wrong of it, Hitler's coup in Austria will go down in the annals of history as a great event. It must be unprecedented. We do not recall any other nation the allegiance of which was transferred in practically twenty-four hours with no blood-shed and without a shot being fired. If the Kaiser was a dangerous man at the head of the German nation, Hitler is doubly so, for here is the man who knows what he wants and who is not any too scrupulous in his methods of getting it. We are all just wondering what the next move of the villain of the piece will be, and how far he will be supported by his confederate Mussolini.

PRAIRIE UNION

AN EDITORIAL in the Albertan informs us that the Young Men's Section of the Calgary Board of Trade adopted a resolution to be presented to the Royal Commission advocating the union of the three Prairie Provinces into one. After arguing itself into the position where it might reasonably be concluded that the writer was in favour of such a union, the Albertan proceeds to certain advantages which would accrue, he proceeds to relate by urging the vastness of the territory to be administered and indulges in an unsupported generalization that the people of the Province concerned would not vote for it.

Then again on the ground that the people would not vote for it, we rather think they would, if given the opportunity, which is extremely unlikely. The politicians with power to protect will likely take care not to run the risk of running themselves out of office by restricting the number of offices to be filled. But show the people of these prairies (who foot the tax bills) where dollars can be saved, and the politicians' welfare will receive but scant consideration at their hands.

In these days distance offers no difficulties in the way of effective administration. If one were to seek for an illustration take, for example, the Canadian Government, a tiny island world wide in its ramifications with apparent success. If it can be done by the C.P.R. why could it not be done in Western Canada?

MINIMUM WAGE LAWS

SUBJECT TO ALL proper exceptions, which we have previously indicated, the principles behind laws regulating minimum wages are sound. The passage of such laws has been rendered necessary by the unfair practice of men and corporations mostly engaged in industry—heartless men and soulless corporations. Little sympathy by the public or loyalty by the employee will be gained by any corporation, which in order to defeat the law, resorts to the subterfuge of charging eight and one third cents per hour for a ten hour day for sleeping accommodation in a movable building, situate out on the prairie, a couple of miles from the station charges going to and from work. And if a corporation needs must descend to such tactics, we would advise a perusal of the law relating to the necessity of taking out livery and chauffeur's licenses. The loyalty of a staff in any business is an important asset often overlooked especially where the accumulation of a big bank account seems to be the main consideration.

ENTER SPRING

THE WINTER of 1933-1934 will be looked back upon by most of us as a short and pleasant one, almost entirely free from the rigours which have attended other similar seasons in recent years. Except for a part of the month of February it was pleasant, mild, and the business of living rendered that much more enjoyable. It has passed quickly, and when Jack Frost made up his mind to desert he did so with unusual alacrity. A week ago and the prairie was white with snow. Today it is all gone and the enthusiastic gardener is beginning to dig out the garden tools and consider his selection of garden seeds.

Reports of those interested show that stock in these parts have come through the winter in much better condition than the average. The district around Hanna seems to have suffered rather severely, but now that the Federal and Provincial Ministers of Agriculture appear to have natched up their differences and managed to arrange a conference, farmers and ranchers appear to have enough feed on hand obtained via the relief route, to prevent further and greater losses.

At any rate, apart from any diving kinks which the present winter may let fly, we can look back upon it as a pleasant and good one.

ST. PATRICK

ST. PATRICK, the patron Saint of Ireland, (we hope Mr. De Valera will pardon us not using the word "Eire") like most of the Patron Saints was not born of the soil. For he was a Welshman, born about the year 390 in Glamorganshire. Carried off to Ireland by a gang of Irish marauders as a boy, he finally escaped landed up in a monastery in Gaul where he spent a few years before returning home. While home he conceived the idea of establishing Christianity in Ireland, and for this purpose returned to Gaul to prepare himself for his mission, which he took up with two or three others successfully.

He was a man of intensely spiritual nature, and in addition to the qualities which go to form a strong man of action, he must have possessed an enthusiasm which enabled him to surmount all difficulties. He was responsible for bringing Ireland into contact with Western Europe, and Rome, laid the new evangel in the city in the World, and introduced Latin as the official language of the Catholic Church in his mission field. His work was done mostly in the northern part of Ireland, but his influence was felt all over that much troubled land. There appears to be no foundation for the traditional story that St. Patrick was immortalized by his feat of driving out of the country all the snakes which then infested it.

Just how the 17th day of March came to be the day of annual celebration is not clear, but regardless of that it is certainly the one day of the year when Irishmen can let themselves go, and they have always lots of company.

SOCIAL CREDIT PROGRAM UPSET

THE ALBERTA COUNCIL OF REGULATION, which the Alberta government planned on introducing social credit has been discredited by the Supreme Court of Canada and things are now in a state of confusion.

The court held that the Credit of Alberta Regulations Act was unconstitutional and this knocked out the entire social credit plan. The same treatment was given the Taxation of Banks Act, which legislation was nothing but a punitive measure.

The Act "to ensure the publication of accurate news and information" was also held unconstitutional. This was a retaliatory measure against the press of the province. Finally the supreme court declared that the federal government had power to disallow provincial legislation and lieutenant-governors had power to reserve their assent from provincial legislation subject only to any instructions from the attorney general.

It is fortunate for the people of Alberta that the Supreme court rendered these decisions. The Alberta government was well on its way to setting up an arrogant autocracy had legislation upheld. The province would have been subjected to a regimentation of people and an invasion of popular rights and privileges such as has never before been experienced in a democratic country.

The objective of the legislation appeared to be the driving from this province of the established banking institutions, the substituting therefore of government credit houses and the domination of the newspapers in order that criticism might be suppressed and the people made docile. We would have thought that the Alberta government would have been subjected to a regimentation of people and an invasion of popular rights and privileges such as has never before been experienced in a democratic country.

The record of the government to date is most uninspiring. It has shown an inexperience in business and legal affairs that has caused endless confusion and a great deal of expense. It has exhibited a regard for the decencies of parliamentary ethics, an insatiable lust for power and money and a complete ignorance of the established order of things.

The whole experience is just another good theory gone wrong—Hanna Herald.

SUNKEN GUNS

DIVERS ARE fishing up from the shallow depths of Dead Man's Bay, off Kingston, guns and boarding pieces and pieces of hand saws cut planking cut out of the sides of frigates sunk 120 years ago. The salvage is for historic relics to be mounted in the Government Museum at Fort Garry, a mile or so from Dead Man's Bay. But time and submergence have turned these rusted relics into trophies of peace, for they are taken out of British men-of-war which sailed the Great Lakes, but were sunk in combat with the vessels of the United States. The Resolute, a frigate, in 1817, was wrecked at the close of the war of 1812, states the Manitoba Free Press.

It is true that naval precedence sank the frigates and the Resolute in shallow waters, in case, as the history truly believed, the peace would not last and the ships would have to be recommissioned. But the peace lasted, and the frigates, bristling with guns and manned with lusty ratings, stayed as deeply sunk 17 feet in Dead Man's Bay, as if they had been sunk 170 fathoms out in the lake.

That act of peace, that mutual decision to disarm a frontier, gave the neighboring countries on this continent the great boon that has allowed them all the privileges that have gone with dwelling in a state of peace that seemed to pioneer people to be the only intelligent state to follow. They knew how to agree, to differ. They came in time to respect one another. And because they were sane enough to sink their guns 120 years ago, they have established a neighborhood which is extolled everywhere in the world but unrecognized by two adjoining nations almost anywhere—Weyburn Review.

RELIEF EXPENDITURES

A calculation of how much Canada has spent on relief from the end of 1930 up to the present time provides the surprising total of $900 million. This relief bill was contributed by the municipalities, provinces and the federal government, and at least about $500 million represents direct relief. This direct relief increased from $4 million in 1931 and reached $103 million in 1933. The year 1930 saw the largest expenditure on relief, the grand total being $170 million.

An unfortunate feature of the whole business is that a very large percentage of this enormous sum of money was raised through bond issues and becomes a charge upon posterity. This was necessary because it was impossible for the 10% million people in Canada to provide, out of direct taxation, enough money to meet the bill.

Another unfortunate feature is that, unquestionably, a considerable percentage of the money was wasted in that it fell into the hands of unscrupulous people who took advantage of the situation to obtain money to which they were not entitled. Others suspiciously folded their arms and accepted relief under the credo that their presence in the world entitled them to a living at someone else's expense.

There is the greatest sympathy for people who had to get relief in order to live and who were unfortunate enough to lose their employment and were unable to get it on their own. Very few people begrudged the governmental expenditures for relief on such subjects, but the taxpayers of the country are becoming more and more inclined to the belief that a lot of wasted and unnecessary expenditures have been in providing relief. There is to be an increase of sentiment against large relief expenditures and a greater insistence on the careful scrutiny of each applicant.

EVEN THE best pictures cannot show war in all its horror and ugliness. They may depict some of the blood, some of the violence and destruction, but they leave unrecorded the terrible will to kill, the even more terrible will to live, the love, the loyalty and the utter heartiness of a whole people. No picture can convey the sounds that come from a thousand dying men or the smells that come from a thousand dead men.—Life.

Mrs. Fisher Suggests

CANADIAN FISH FRIGATES. They mean from six to six slices of bacon and fry the pieces until crisp, then add the following mixture: Two cups of any Canadian cooked and flaked fish, two eggs, two slices of onion, finely minced, and one-half cup of fish oil (from mackerel) first slowly, stirring meanwhile, and then, when the mixture is fairly hot, add the fish and onion. The ingredients may be added for a change of flavor.

Canadian Fish and Shellfish are especially good foods because they are so easily digested and are rich in vitamins and health-giving mineral substances.

PNEUMOTHORAX

When tuberculosis is diagnosed, what is the patient to do? The answer to this question is REST. This because everyone will agree that in the treatment of tuberculosis, the most important point is rest, physical and mental.

In tuberculosis, the lung is diseased, and the activity of the activity of the lung is diminished and so the healing forces are given a better chance to arrest the disease process, but the progress of the disease, and bring about a cure.

At birth, air first enters the lungs when breathing begins. This air, which is at atmospheric pressure, causes the lungs to expand, and filling chest cavity. Owing to their elasticity, the lungs tend to contract again, the atmospheric pressure, and this creates a slight negative pressure or suction in the chest cavity outside of the lung itself.

Between the lung and the chest wall there is a pleura, a smooth covering of two layers, the larger one of which covers the lung, and the other, the inner side of the chest wall. In the act of breathing, these two coverings glide the one over the other.

Within recent years, artificial pneumothorax has been used to place a diseased lung at rest, in order to increase the chance of healing. This is accomplished by introducing air into the pleural cavity, the space between the two coverings or layers of pleura. The introduction of air into the pleural cavity reduces the negative pressure that is normal in that cavity, so equalizes the pressure that is exerted on the lungs from within and without. The result is that the lung collapses and is at rest.

Not all patients require pneumothorax, and in cases suitable for such treatment, for those cases which are selected after proper examination and studies, there is no doubt that this form of treatment has revolutionized the outlook. The treatment must be maintained by injections of air for months and possibly years. This does not mean that any less time is to be given as regards the other points of treatment. It does not mean, however, that much can be done for cases that were considered hopeless, it speeds up recovery in many cases, lessens the chance of spread of the other lung, reduces sputum and so minimizes the chance of spread of the disease and, altogether, represents a great advance in the treatment of a disease which is still one of the most common and persistent enemies of mankind.
